The Spirit of Radio Returns: Rush Brings the Fifty Something Tour to Tampa for Two Nights

Benchmark International Arena hosts Geddy Lee and Alex Lifeson on November 9 and 11 — the band's first tour in 11 years, and a celebration of the music and the memory of Neil Peart.

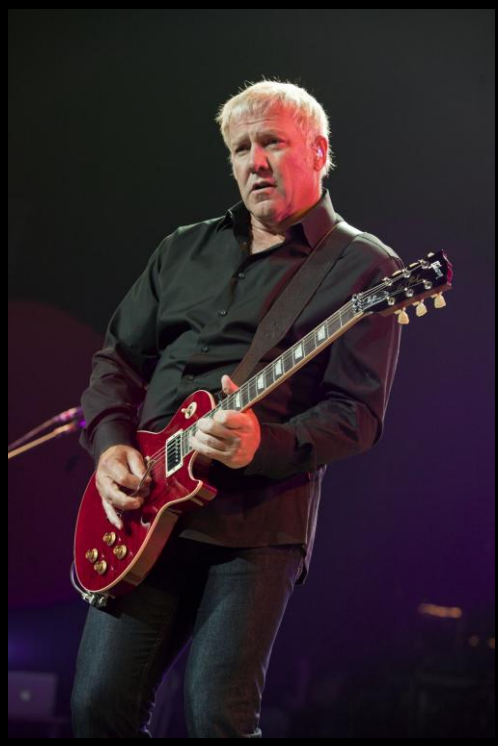

For a decade, it existed only in the past tense. Rush — the Canadian trio whose precision and ambition rewrote what a rock band could do — played its final show on August 1, 2015, closing the R40 tour at the Forum in Los Angeles. When drummer and lyricist Neil Peart died on January 7, 2020, at 67, after a battle with glioblastoma, the story seemed permanently finished. Geddy Lee and Alex Lifeson had said as much themselves: no Neil, no Rush.

Then came October 2025, and one of the great surprises in recent rock history. Lee and Lifeson announced they would tour again in 2026 — the Fifty Something Tour, a celebration of more than five decades of Rush music and of Peart's life. The response overwhelmed even the band. The first dates sold out immediately, and what began as a limited run has grown into 58 shows across 24 cities in 2026, with more than half a million tickets sold and an international leg of 26 dates in 13 countries already announced for early 2027.

Tampa gets two of those nights: Monday, November 9, and Wednesday, November 11, at Benchmark International Arena, the Tampa Bay Lightning's downtown home. Both shows start at 7:30 p.m.

The tour opened on June 7 at the Kia Forum in Inglewood, California — the same building where the R40 tour ended in 2015 — and Lee has framed the whole enterprise plainly: a chance "to pay tribute to our past and to Neil" by performing a vast selection of Rush songs in the cities the band hasn't played in far too long. Filling the most scrutinized drum chair in rock is Anika Nilles, the German drummer, composer, and producer who played more than 60 shows behind Jeff Beck and has released four solo albums. Keyboardist Loren Gold — a veteran of The Who and Roger Daltrey's bands — rounds out the lineup, freeing Lee from splitting his attention between bass, vocals, and keyboards.

These are "evening with" performances: two full sets, built from a working catalog of more than 35 songs that rotate from night to night. Fans who caught early stops have heard complete album sides — the first side of 2112, the first side of Moving Pictures — alongside staples like "Tom Sawyer," "Limelight," "Xanadu," and "Closer to the Heart," with tribute moments to Peart woven through both sets. Lee and Lifeson, both 73, rehearsed roughly 40 songs, so each city gets its own version of the band. That means the two Tampa shows will not be at the same concert twice.

Rush, inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame in 2013, built one of music's most devoted followings without ever chasing radio fashion. Tampa Bay's classic-rock audience has waited 11 years for a chance most had stopped expecting. Two arena nights in a single week, in the middle of downtown, attached to the biggest rock story of the year: this is as close to a sure thing as the fall concert calendar gets.

I first heard RUSH in ninth grade when Mike Fenton put his headphones on my ears and said I really had to listen to these guys. It opened my eyes to who this band was and what an amazing act they are. It only grew stronger when I met and married my husband, Howard, who is a complete RUSH fan and a drummer who loves to play Neil Peart's work.

Over the years, we have seen RUSH more times than I can count, taking our kids to countless shows as they grew up and bringing RUSH's music to the next generation. Howard has seen RUSH 61 times, and now we're taking it on the road and seeing them in other venues. Don't be surprised to see all age groups and all types of people at the show, as RUSH transcends time and date.

If you go: RUSH: Fifty Something — Mon November 9 & Wed November 11, 2026, 7:30 p.m., Benchmark International Arena, 401 Channelside Dr, Tampa. Tickets are on sale now through Ticketmaster.

Choosing the Tuesday after the first Monday in November as America's national federal Election Day is a historical artifact—a legislative compromise shaped by horse-and-buggy travel, religious observances, and the agrarian rhythm of the mid-19th century.

In the early decades of the American Republic, no single national voting day existed. Under federal legislation passed in 1792, states were granted a 34-day window preceding the first Wednesday in December to hold presidential elections.

This decentralized setup created two major problems as the country expanded:

- Voter Manipulation and Fraud: Without a uniform polling date, partisan operatives could track early returns from states that voted in October and use that momentum to influence voters in states voting weeks later. Furthermore, the staggered schedule allowed individuals to travel across state lines to cast illegal ballots in multiple elections.

- The Rise of the Telegraph: By the 1840s, rapid communication via the electric telegraph meant election results traveled almost instantaneously. The risk of early results swaying late-voting states became an acute concern for national political leaders.

To resolve these issues, the 28th Congress passed the Presidential Election Day Act, which President John Tyler signed into law on January 23, 1845. The statute required all states to appoint presidential electors on a single day: the Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Congress chose this specific formula based on practical considerations of 1840s American life:

- Why November? Mid-19th-century America was overwhelmingly rural. Spring was reserved for planting, summer for crop maintenance, and early autumn for harvesting. Mid-November was ideal: the crops were in, but heavy winter snows had not yet rendered unpaved roads impassable.

- Why Tuesday? Most voters lived miles from their county seat—the only place with a polling location. Traveling by horse or on foot could take a full day.
  - Sunday was ruled out because it was reserved for Christian worship and rest.
  - Monday was ruled out as a voting day because voters would have had to travel on Sunday to reach the polls in time.
  - Wednesday was avoided because it was traditionally market day, when farmers conducted business and sold livestock.
  - Tuesday emerged as the ideal window: farmers could leave on Monday morning, arrive at the county seat, vote on Tuesday, and return home in time for market day on Wednesday.

- The statutory wording was deliberately chosen to prevent Election Day from ever falling on November 1. November 1 posed two problems: it was All Saints' Day (a Roman Catholic holy day of obligation), and it was the standard day for merchants and bankers to settle the previous month's financial accounts.

The first presidential election conducted under this unified timeline took place on November 7, 1848, electing Whig candidate Zachary Taylor.

Initially, the 1845 law applied only to presidential electors. Many states continued holding congressional and state elections on separate dates, often in August or October.

To streamline the process and reduce election costs, Congress passed legislation in 1872 establishing the same Tuesday after the first Monday in November (in even-numbered years) as the official date for elections to the U.S. House of Representatives. After the 17th Amendment was ratified in 1913, direct elections for the U.S. Senate were integrated into the same schedule.

While the statutory date remains unchanged in federal law, the practical reality of American voting has evolved. With the widespread adoption of early voting, mail-in ballots, and no-excuse absentee voting, "Election Day" now serves as the final deadline in a multi-week voting period rather than a single 24-hour event.

Still the King of Shock Rock: Alice Cooper

Legendary shock-rock pioneer Alice Cooper proved that age is nothing but a number, delivering a masterclass in theatrical hard rock at Ruth Eckerd Hall. From the second the curtain dropped to the final echo of the encore, the night was an unrelenting rush of iconic hits, dark showmanship, and world-class musicianship.

At 78, Cooper's voice remains astonishingly strong, gritty, and commanding. Delivering razor-sharp vocals on classics like "No More Mr. Nice Guy," "Feed My Frankenstein," and "Poison," his signature rasp sounded just as potent as it did decades ago. Every lyric landed with precision and swagger, showing incredible endurance and range through an intense, fast-paced set list.

He had a heavy-hitting mix of immortal classics and deep-cut fan favorites. These are just some of the tracks we heard live:

- "No More Mr. Nice Guy" — An instant crowd-pleaser that sets an energetic, singalong tone early in the show.
- "I'm Eighteen" — Delivered with the raw, rebellious angst that made it an anthem for generations.
- "Billion Dollar Babies" — Rich with heavy riffs and signature theatrical flair.
- "Feed My Frankenstein" — A massive, hard-rocking monster of a track that brings out the full weight of the stage props.
- "Poison" — A late-set powerhouse that has the entire venue singing every single word.
- "Ballad of Dwight Fry" — A dramatic, atmospheric peak in the set showcasing Alice's unmatched theatrical performance.
- "Cold Ethyl" — Creepy, hilarious, and driven by an infectious, pounding rhythm.
- "School's Out" — The ultimate show-stopping finale, complete with high-energy solos and explosive stage energy.

An Alice Cooper show blends first-rate theatrical production with the force of a rock concert. Wearing his signature stage attire, Cooper held the audience with natural authority, channeling the sinister wit and shadowy fantasy that established him as a cultural icon. Elaborate staging, memorable props, and sweeping dramatic flourishes delivered exactly what fans expected, reaffirming his position as the genre's unrivaled master.

To anyone questioning whether classic rock veterans can still generate genuine intensity, Cooper offered an emphatic answer in Clearwater: absolutely. The night was an unforgettable, high-energy spectacle, leaving the crowd captivated by a bona fide rock legend and his exceptional band.

Rays Look Ahead: A Bright Future in Tampa Bay

For Tampa Bay Rays fans, the 2026 season provided plenty of reasons for optimism and pride. Although the team ultimately fell short of its goal of capturing a World Series championship, its accomplishments deserve recognition. Reaching baseball's biggest stage is no small achievement, particularly for a franchise that has appeared in the Fall Classic just three times in its history.

Entering the season, the Rays faced their share of questions, and few anticipated the level of success the club would achieve. Yet Tampa Bay consistently demonstrated its competitiveness, finishing the regular season with an impressive 98-64 record and capturing the American League East title for the first time since 2021. A combination of disciplined pitching, timely offensive production, resilience, and collective determination made the Rays one of baseball's most compelling stories of the year.

Their postseason performance further cemented that reputation. Tampa Bay swept the New York Yankees in the American League Division Series before facing the Cleveland Guardians in the American League Championship Series. Following a hard-fought six-game matchup, the Rays emerged victorious, claiming the American League pennant and securing their third World Series appearance. Their previous trips to the Fall Classic came in 2008 and 2020, establishing a postseason tradition that continues to grow.

The World Series, however, did not deliver the outcome Tampa Bay supporters had hoped for. The Milwaukee Brewers captured the championship in five games, although the Rays provided a memorable highlight with a 4-3 victory in a dramatic 12-inning Game 4. While another championship opportunity slipped away, the team's journey to the World Series was an accomplishment in its own right. Tampa Bay has reached the Fall Classic in 2008, 2020, and 2026, finishing runner-up each time. The elusive title remains a goal, but this season demonstrated that the organization has the talent and competitive foundation to pursue it again.

Beyond the on-field accomplishments, the franchise is entering an exciting period of transition. Under new ownership, plans for a state-of-the-art ballpark signal a significant investment in the long-term future of professional baseball in Tampa Bay.

The proposed new stadium will be located on the Dale Mabry campus of Hillsborough College in Tampa, across the street from Raymond James Stadium and adjacent to George M. Steinbrenner Field. With a planned capacity of approximately 31,000 seats, the facility will anchor a larger mixed-use development featuring entertainment venues, restaurants, retail establishments, and public gathering spaces. The project received approval from Tampa City Council and Hillsborough County commissioners in August 2026, marking a major milestone for the franchise. The organization is targeting Opening Day 2029 for the new ballpark.

In the meantime, fans can continue supporting their team at Tropicana Field in St. Petersburg, where the Rays are expected to play through the 2028 season. The transition offers a chance to celebrate the team's history while looking ahead to an entirely new era of Rays baseball.

For longtime supporters, a new ballpark represents far more than an upgraded facility. It offers renewed stability, a stronger connection with the surrounding community, and the promise that Major League Baseball will remain an important part of the Tampa Bay landscape for generations to come.
As attention turns toward next season, the challenge will be building on the momentum established in 2026. The Rays have shown they can compete at the highest level, and expectations will undoubtedly be higher as they pursue another postseason opportunity.

The World Series trophy may remain just out of reach, but this season gave Tampa Bay something equally important: renewed confidence in its team and its future. With another season on the horizon and a new ballpark approaching, Rays fans have every reason to stay optimistic. The next chapter of Tampa Bay baseball could be its most exciting yet

NOV 14

ROWDIES VS TBD - PLAYOFF (EASTERN FINALS)

SATURDAY | TBD

AL LANG STADIUM, ST. PETERSBURG, FL

After one of the most successful regular seasons in club history, the Tampa Bay Rowdies kick off the 2026 USL Championship Playoffs this Friday at Al Lang Stadium in an Eastern Conference Quarterfinal matchup against Miami FC. For the first time since 2021, the Rowdies enter the playoffs as the top overall seed as winners of the USL Championship Players' Shield, guaranteeing hosting rights throughout their quest for a third championship star.

Fueled by the bitter disappointment of missing out on qualifying for last year's playoffs, the Rowdies bounced back with an overhauled roster to mount an impressive campaign that began with a 12-match undefeated streak to take early control of the Players' Shield race. The Rowdies never relented their hold on the top spot in the standings, ultimately securing the Players' Shield with one match to spare. The Rowdies ended their campaign with a record of 18W-5L-7D, becoming the first team to claim the Players' Shield after missing the postseason the previous year.

One notable aspect of the Rowdies' campaign to claim the Players' Shield was the balance the club showed at both ends of the field throughout the regular season. The Rowdies were the only side to rank in the top three in the league in both goals (52) and goals conceded (26) this year. The same goes for the Rowdies' rankings in Expected Goals (49.06xG) and Expected Goals Against (28.47xGA).

The Rowdies' balance also shows up in the crucial final stages of matches. The club's +12-goal differential in the final 15 minutes and stoppage time this season ranks the best across the entire USL Championship. That ability to lock things down or find a breakthrough moment in front of the opposition goal can prove crucial in the single-elimination format of the USL Championship Playoffs.

Miami makes its return to the USL Championship Playoffs for the first time since 2022. That year, the Rowdies knocked out their in-state rivals in a 3-1 win when the two sides met at Al Lang in the Eastern Conference Quarterfinals. Second-year Head Coach Gastón Maddoni led Miami over the playoff line as the eighth seed in the Eastern Conference thanks in large part to a six-match unbeaten streak (four wins, two draws) that included all of September and the first week of October. Miami's rally to claim the final playoff spot in the east also included a 2-1 win over the Rowdies at Al Lang earlier this month. Maddoni will not be on the touchline for Miami this Friday as he serves a suspension for a red card in the club's regular-season finale.

In theory, winning the USL Championship Players' Shield can set a club up for success. However, the reality is that the playoffs can prove to be a whole different animal for the top team from the regular season. The Players' Shield winner has lost in the first round of the playoffs in two of the last three years. San Antonio FC in 2022 were the last Players' Shield to win the USL Championship title in the playoffs. Rowdies Head Coach Dominic Casciato experienced both sides of the coin during his time leading Union Omaha in USL League One. Casciato guided Omaha to back-to-back Players' Shield. Omaha fell short of their ultimate goal in the playoffs in 2023 but got the job done the following year in the USL League One Final.

The Rowdies are inviting kickoff to Halloween Weekend at Al Lang Stadium for their playoff matchup against Miami. Trick-or-treat stations for families will be set up in the Michelob Ultra Fan Zone outside Gate 2 before the match and inside the stadium. Fans are encouraged to come dressed for the occasion in their Halloween costumes. Select fans will also be chosen to take part in several costume contests during halftime. For more information, visit rowdiessoccer.com/halloween.

Anyone can develop PTSD at any age. Some factors can increase the chance that someone will develop PTSD, many of which are not under that person's control. For example, very intense or long-lasting trauma makes it more likely that a person will develop PTSD. It is also more common after sexual assault. For Veterans, combat-related trauma also makes PTSD more common. And being injured during the trauma can increase the risk of PTSD.

Personal factors—like previous traumatic exposure, age, and sex—can affect whether a person will develop PTSD. What happens after the traumatic event is also important. Stress can make PTSD more likely, while social support can make it less likely. Don't Take My Word for It - It's in the News! Don't just take my word for it - it's in the news, so it must be true!

WFLA News Channel 8 just reported a new Redfin analysis with a headline Tampa Bay buyers are going to love: early November is typically the BEST time of the year to get a deal on a home in Tampa. No, I didn't pay them to say that. I checked. Twice.

Here's why this little window is such a big deal:

First, the competition thins out. Most buyers get pulled into Halloween candy, turkey planning, and holiday shopping, so the buyers still out shopping have real room to negotiate.

Second, sellers are ready to deal. A home that's been sitting since summer? That seller wants it wrapped up before the New Year, and that can mean movement on price, closing costs, or terms they wouldn't have considered in the spring rush.

Third - and this one is pure Florida - the snowbirds haven't landed yet. After the New Year, a whole new wave of buyers flies in from the cold. Right now, local buyers have the field mostly to themselves.

Now for the honest part, because that's how I do business: there are fewer brand-new listings this time of year. But if the right home is already out there waiting, this is exactly when you make your move.

Thinking about Apollo Beach, MiraBay, Riverview, or Gibsonton? I'd love to show you the homes in our area that have been sitting the longest - the ones most likely to negotiate.
